While the monolithic notion of Orange County as an ultra-conservative bedroom community has long been laid to rest, little has yet been said about the small but active counterculture that flourished here for generations. Come hear about early quasi-utopian colonies, Timothy Leary's Laguna adventures, Aldous Huxley's visit to Trabuco Canyon's Ramakrishna Monastery, the Yippies' "liberation" of Disney's Tom Sawyer's Island, and many more tales of local free-thinkers, beatniks, non-conformists, cultists, Communists, iconoclasts, and unclassifiable wingnuts. Journalist/author/commentator Jim Washburn will "discuss the leftish side of the county, in a manner that shows just how entertaining history can be when the speaker has no regard for facts."

Washburn has written about music, popular culture and politics for the L.A. Times, O.C. Register, O.C. Weekly and publications from Rolling Stone to Reader's Digest. He co-authored the book Martin Guitars, an Illustrated Celebration and the John Crean autobiography, The Wheel and I. He has curated four exhibits at the Fullerton Museum Center, on such topics as O.C.'s rock music history and O.C. in the disco era.
